GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF ARBOR DAY

The golden anniversary of Arbor Day is being celebrated throughout the United States today. After day was first celebrated in Nebraska in 1872. More than a million trees were planted in that state on this day. Arbor Day. Nearly a billion trees have been planted throughout the United States, not throughout the world. It is annually observed in Canada, Spain, South Africa, Panama, Australia, New Zealand, France, Norway, Russia, Japan and China. Hereafter each state has set its own date for holding Arbor Day exercises. This year, however, President Harding by proclamation, has asked all states to observe the day on the day designated by Nebraska, where the idea originated. The date for April 22 was selected because it is the birthday anniversary of J. Sterling Morton at one time secretary of agriculture. Mr. Morton was the originator of Arbor Day in the state of Nebraska, where he was a pioneer in agricultural development.

PLEDGE TO SOLDIERS IS CARRIED OUT

The nation-wide clean-up campaign conducted by the veterans' bureau for the purpose of locating and caring for disabled veterans has been completed. This drive was inaugurated immediately after the formation of the bureau and was designed to carry out the administration pledge that the disabled veterans would be given every assistance.

More than 175,000 ex-service men were interviewed during this campaign and approximately 110,000 new claims were handled as a result. The number of claims filed indicate that there were thousands of veterans throughout the United States, particularly in the mountainous and rural districts, who were unaware of the benefits to which they were entitled and uninformed as to the procedure of obtaining relief. It was largely on the basis of these men for whom no claims had been filed that the charges of neglect of the disabled veterans was based. Thousands of these cases would never have been brought to the attention of the government had it not been for these clean up squads.

The squads sent out from the various district offices visited over 1500 cities and every state in the union. In the remote districts transportation facilities were inadequate and it was necessary for these representatives of the veterans' bureau to travel by horseback and during the last snowfall it was necessary for the representatives in the northwest territory to travel on skis.

As a result of the clean up drive, 47,846 new compensation claims were filed and 32,804 appeals from previous compensation awards were made. The medical officers with these squads made 71,881 physical examinations. Disabled veterans who were in such a condition that they required hospital treatment were immediately hospitalized. In many cases these men were in very serious condition, particularly tuberculosis cases. Almost 5000, to be exact, 4957, veterans were hospitalized during this campaign. This number constitutes approximately one-sixth of the entire ex-service hospital population of the veterans' bureau.

Twenty-seven thousand, two hundred and thirty-four training claims were filed for ex-service men during this drive and 2384 vocational training appeals were also filed. Many of these appeals were from section 3 training which carries with it tuition and books to section 2 training which allows maintenance and support pay, as well as tuition and books.

In addition to the filing of compensation and vocational training claims, a large number of applications for reinstatement and conversion of war risk insurance were also made. There are over 30,000 miscellaneous cases not enumerated above which includes such requests as application for copy of discharge in lieu of the last discharge, information relative to pending claims and numerous other requests for information.

EUROPE NEEDS ITS OWN MAN POWER

According to a report just made to Secretary Davis of the department of labor, by Dr. John Conatas, who has made an investigation of European conditions, all nations in Europe with the exception of Italy, would be benefited by a very severe restriction by the United States of immigration from those countries. Dr. Conatas states that with the exception of Italy there is a great scarcity of laborers in every country in Europe.

The tremendous loss of man power during the war coupled with the vast amount of reconstruction work which is necessary, as well as the need for more men to till the soil and increase the food supply of Europe, makes it necessary for all Europe to retain its man power. It is to experience economic rehabilitation. Dr. Conatas says that generally speaking, wages are proportionately higher, even at the present rate of exchange, than they were before the war and that the laboring classes of Europe are better off than they were in pre-war days. According to Dr. Conatas, European countries are not desirous of their people emigrating.

This statement is afforded substantiation by the figures issued by the bureau of immigration. These figures show that the outward tide of emigration is carrying more people back to their homelands than are being brought here by the tide of immigration. The Poles lead in emigration from this country to their homeland. In the eight months ending March 1, this year, there were only 6000 immigrants had arrived, while in the same period 25,000 had left this country for Poland. Among their nationalities whose emigration exceeded the immigration to this country were Bohemians, Czechs, Bulgars, Serbs, Greeks, Italians, Lithuanians, Portuguese, Romanians and Spaniards. The leading nationalities and races whose immigration has greatly exceeded the departures are the English, French, Germans, Hebrews, Irish, Scandinavians, Scotch, Mexicans and Slovaks.

THE DOCTRINE OF SELF HELP

There is the clearest kind of economic truth in the first of a number of principles set forth by allied experts as essentials for the reconstruction of Europe. One principle declares:

"The essential requisite for the economic reconstruction of Europe is the achievement by each country of stability in the value of its currency. No country can gain control of its own currency so long as there is a deficiency in the annual budget which is met by the creation of paper money or bank credits. It is for every country to overcome such deficiency by its own independent efforts."

The ancient doctrine of self help is thus well stated, although perhaps with more verbiage than necessary. "Spend less than your income," is what the allied experts are trying to impress upon all European countries as a prerequisite to restored stability. There is no great mystery about sound national finances. Government business is based upon exactly the same fundamental principles as individual business. The manufacturer, the farmer, the wage earner, soon learn by experience, if they do not by reason, that any man who spends more than his income is headed for bankruptcy. The man who finds his expenditures exceeding his income has one of two alternatives—to increase his income or reduce his expenses. Failing to adopt either course, his credit soon disappears and financial disaster results.

The same thing is true of governments. In an unusual emergency, either an individual or a government must incur a debt, but on the passing of the emergency, the first effort and thought should be directed toward reduction of the debt. This important end some of the European governments have been slow in attempting to attain. Instead of reducing their debts, some of the nations have been adding to their burdens, apparently trusting to fate to get them out of their difficulties.

Doubtless, some of the nations of Europe have felt that by some means the United States would be induced to lift a part of their burdens and this hope may have encouraged them to postpone the task of getting their finances in good shape. The refusal of this country to send delegates to the Genoa conference was due notice that the people of this country intend to give their first attention to the difficult problem of paying their own debts and keeping their expenses within their income. That this is the American policy, the allied experts evidently fully realize, for they are plain spoken in telling the delinquent nations to get down to work and back to normal.

By an unprecedented plurality, the American people voted for a "back to normal" policy in 1920, and congress and the executive have been cooperating in the work of cutting down expenses. Results have been attested by the improvement in national credit—government bonds that formerly sold for 85 cents on the dollar are now worth a hundred.

"OFTEN SEEN IN PUBLIC PLACES"

Chairman Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific railroad, recently recalled public attention to the fact very noticeable during the McAdoo management of the railroads—that McAdoo had his name printed on every ticket, every menu, every bulletin, every time table and every bulletin. This subject was brought up by Mr. Kruttschnitt in the course of his testimony in answer to the McAdoo charge that the railroads had broken down prior to the taking out of the roads by the government. The use made by Mr. McAdoo of the advertising possibilities of railroad publications is a very convincing indication of one of the controlling influences at work—the desire to use the roads for personal aggrandizement. Results must have been disappointing to the director of railroads, however, for the more the people learned of government operation, the poorer opinion they had of the operators. The country was as much disgusted with McAdoo's egoism as it was pleased with his incompetency.
